Abstract: Web of Science (WoS) is covering Biointerface Research in Applied Chemistry (BRIAC) from 2015 onwards. However, we performed its 1st bibliometric analysis of the last five years (from 2016 to 2020). The data from WoS was retrieved on 8th February 2021. In this period, BRIAC has published seven hundred and fifty-seven documents (n=757), majorly comprising research articles (n=665), reviews (n=86), and editorials (n=6). In all publications, exactly 2519 authors, 838 institutes or departments, and 77 countries have contributed. For numerical representations, we designed the publication and citation clubs. One thousand four hundred and thirty-four (n=1434) citations were noted. The total h-index was found to be 11, while the citation per item was recorded to be 1.89. The unofficial impact factor is 1.93. The calculation is based on citations in 2020 (498), divided by papers published in 2018-2019 (258). By VOSviewer analysis, we also represented the co-authorship network for authors, institutes, and countries. Four thousand nine hundred and thirty-eight (n=4938) keywords were noted in all publications. By co-words analysis, we represented the trends in publications. From WoS, we retrieved the per year h-index, citation per item, and total citations of BRIAC. It is worthy to note that BRIAC has accepted 600 research articles for the year 2021. All issues in 2021 are already published in advance. The present research article (bibliometric report) is paper number 600th, and it is closing the year. Based on the data, it can be concluded that in a short span of the last five years, BRIAC showed positive growth.

1. Introduction

Bibliometrics is a quantitative and statistical analysis tool that illustrates the publication patterns related to a particular field or a source of publications. It offers a general outline and overall structure of a particular research area [1]. It can also evaluate and determine the influence and contributions of various journals, countries, and institutions [2]. The bibliometric analysis also helps identify the leading journals, authors, and countries involved in publications in a particular research area [3]. The present project is designed to study the publication history and progress of Biointerface Research in Applied Chemistry (BRIAC). The data was retrieved from the Web of Science (WoS) in February 2021. Based on the number of publications and citations, we aim to highlight the top-ranked researchers, institutions, and countries. We have also performed the co-words analysis, which may help understand the research trend or focus of publications.

2. Materials and Methods

2.1. Source of information.

In the present study, we used the WoS database. The data was retrieved in February 2021. We extracted the data from January 2016 to December 2020 using the name and ISSN of the journal (BRIAC). The authors collected, downloaded, and later quantitatively and qualitatively analyzed in Microsoft Excel 2013 for access type, year, author name, document type, keywords, affiliations, and country.

2.2. Visualization maps.

There are various software tools for conducting science mapping, for example, Bibexcel, Bibliometrix, BiblioMaps, CiteSpace, CitNetExplorer, SciMAT, and Sci²Tool. Here, we used VOSviewer version 1.6.9. The software was developed by Van Eck and Waltman for constructing and visualizing bibliometric networks.

3. Results and Discussion

3.1. Types of documents.

BRIAC has completed and celebrated ten years of platinum open access [4]. WoS started covering it from 2015 onwards.

Figure 1. The per year publications, h-index, citations per item, and total citations obtained from WoS. (*=Most of the citations are not yet generated, and this is a normal value because the papers were just published, and there is a probable delay of 3-6 months until papers are cited).

Till December 2020, it has completed research publications of seven hundred and fifty-seven documents (n=757), majorly comprising of research articles (n=665), reviews (n=86), and editorials (n=6). The total numbers of publications are described in Figure 1. The highest number of documents were published in 2020 (n=302), followed by 2019 (n=137), 2016 (n=136), 2018 (n=121) and 2017 (n=61). WoS categorized all publications in applied chemistry. Based on WoS data, we also presented the per year h-index, citations per document and total citations (Figure 1).

3.2. Details about authors, institutes, & countries and VOSviewer analysis.

This part of the manuscript is dedicated to all researchers, institutions, and countries that have significantly contributed to all research publications (n=757). Numerically we focused on a number of publications and citation analysis. It is a bibliometric technique that explores the patterns, frequency of citations, and academic researchers' efficiency [1-3]. Citation analysis can be carried out for authors, institutes, countries, and the most influential or productive documents. In all publications, exactly 2519 authors, 838 institutes, and 77 countries have significantly contributed (from 2016 till 2020). To categorize authors, institutes, and countries, we designed the publication and citation clubs. The data is depicted in Table 1 and Table 2, respectively. Furthermore, details about each author (Table S1), institute (Table S2), and country (Table S3) are also described. Based on the number of publications and total citations, we represented the top ten (n=10) authors, institutes, and countries in Figure 2 A-E.

3.3. The VOSviewer analysis.

Considerable literature is available, which confirms the importance of analysis of co-authorship, citations, and co-citation networks etc. We presented the results as “science mapping”. The details of the analysis are given below. Co-author analysis consists of co-occurrences of authors, institutions, and countries [5]. In fact, it helps in understanding and evaluating scientific collaboration. Co-authorship analysis identifies the co-operation via research articles that are signed by at least two different researchers.

It can measure the volume of work carried out by the teams of scientists at the individual or institutional level and at the national or international level. It is a parameter for measuring the growth (or decline) of co-operative research as compared with research undertaken by a single scientist [6]. The foremost benefits of co-author analysis are endorsing access to modern and expensive instrumentations and assimilating worldwide researchers' participation in intricate tasks. Moreover, it also shows affirmative results on productivity, knowledge, and economic development [7]. Co-author analysis is considered a powerful method used for the identification of leading authors, organizations, and countries in a particular research field. To draw the co-authorship network in VOSviewer, we defined the minimum number of published articles to be three (n=3) with zero (n=0) citations. 170 authors were found to meet the threshold. The institutional co-authorship network is shown in Figure 3. 127 institutes have published at least three documents (Figure 4).

At the same time, 41 countries were found from the data, with at least three (3) publications and zero (0) citations. The data is presented in Figure 5.

3.4. Co-word analysis.

Co-words analysis is used to depict the main theme of a particular research area or a journal. It's important to note that more than four thousand nine hundred and thirty-eight ($n=4938$) keywords appeared in all publications. 221 words appeared at least 5 times. However, we ignored simple words like animals, humans, rats, cells, etc. This may help in portraying the major research focus of all publications.

The publications focused on nanocomposites, nanofibers, nanomaterials, nanoparticles, nanotechnology, silver nanoparticles, magnetic nanoparticles, or different drugs, chemical or compounds like activated carbon, ascorbic acid, biomaterials, biosensor, chitosan, curcumin, essential oil, graphene, heavy metals, Ibuprofen, indigo carmine, pyrazole, and phenol. The authors studied their green chemistry, green synthesis, green method, or organic synthesis. Different instrumental techniques were applied for their characterizations, for example, XPS, XRD, TDM, vibrational analysis, ultrasonic velocity, FTIR, cyclic voltammetry, differential pulse voltammetry. The electrospinning, magnetic properties, and mechanical properties were also described. Furthermore, the authors also applied molecular docking, molecular dynamics simulation, molecular modeling, molecular structure, DFT calculations, docking, force fields, Freundlich to describe their geometrical characteristics or properties. Similarly, other keywords like catalytic behavior, cell membrane capacitors, degradation, dissolution, drug delivery, lithium-ion battery, photocatalysis, wastewater, water treatment, and adsorption may describe their chemical applications. While in biological applications, the authors studied oxidative stress, anti-inflammatory, antibacterial activity, antibiotic resistance, anticancer activity, antimicrobial activity, cytotoxicity, fungicide, insecticide, tissue engineering, and wound healing, etc. They also studied breast cancer, cancer, apoptosis, diabetes, and Alzheimer's disease. The interconnectivity between these keywords is described in Figure 6.

4. Conclusions

We retrieved the citation and relevant data from Web of Science. It is worthy to note that the unofficial impact factor was found to be 1.93 (according to the Web of Science database) (498 citations in 2020 divided by 258 papers published in 2018-2019), meaning that the journal fits in the Q2 zone for applied chemistry. This shows remarkable growth in a short span of time.

5. Limitations

There are some limitations to our study. We noticed writing mistakes in affiliations. For example, in one format, they described post box numbers, while in another, the authors did not add postal addresses. We only performed co-words analysis for keywords. The full-text publications were not analyzed for detailed understanding.
